All Reviews was first flower and the property in tests your residence of the property in tests of the property in Davenport is an officer of the Circuit Court, having been appointed to both places by the Court, and that the Federal Building in which the Post-Office is located is primarily a United States court-house, and that in it must be provided the offices of the courts.

He said that the Chief Supervisor of Elections must keep certain voluminous records, under the law creating the office twenty years ago, and that he must have a place in the Court-House in which to securely keep those court records.

records.

Mr. Deuel cited the decision of Judge Brown in the case of Appraiser Sharpe, of the Customs Department. In that case Postmaster Van Cott ousted United state Commissioner Lynam from his office, and Judge Brown held that as Lynam was clerk of he Circuit Court he could not be ousted.

Postmaster Dayton began his reply by togretting that Congressman Ashbel P. Fitch, who has been making things uncomfortable for Davenport for a year or two was not present to assist him. He had expected Mr. Fitch, but other casagements had prevented his attendance. then Mr. Dayton read letters from the

Mr. Dayton cited several decisions in which Supervisors of Election were spoken of as election officers, not court officers. Davenport is not on the payrolls of any court, and Mr. Dayton argued that he was connected neither with the court nor the Post-Office.

Judge Brown, in deciding the Sharpe-Lynam case, sait that the deed of the building limited its use to the courts and the Post-Office, and Mr. Dayton insisted that Davenport had only been tolerated in the building for twenty-two years.

On finding that the rooms held by Davenport had been for years, and until the increased business of courts and store-rooms, Judge Lacombe said, with a twinkle in his eye, that as the courts were very much crowded he should be glad to co-operate with the Postmaster in assigning them to the imperative needs of the courts and the Post-Office, The little Postmaster next turned to an attack upon the proposition of Davenpoort that he must have room for his valuable records. He said:
"A brief examination by this Court would show that those alleged valuable records are now scattered and heaped up, covered with cobwebs and dust, all over the rooms, and that they could be cared for in one-twentieth of the space new wasted on them.
"That this Supervisor of Elections, who makes his own warrants, makes his own arrests and never comes near the Court except in the rare cases where he finds reason for appearing before the Grand Jury to ask for an indictment, may have this office to visit one month out of the year, these large rooms are held away from the Post-Office and its urgent needs."

The order of the Secretary of the Treasury directing Posts and 178 to the Supervisor was read by Mr. Dayton, from which he argued that, plainly, the Secretary of the Treasury had full power over the building.

The Postmaster disclaimed any intentional content of the court. He insisted that a Commissioner was not "an officer of the court is such an employee of the court as was directly under the control of the court as was directly sasigned to Davenport as Chief Supervisor of Elections and not as a Commissioner. A Supervisor is appointed by the courts, but is hardly an officer of the court, who is also "an officer of the court."
